Description :

PDF-f8cb8 | The result of an eight-year research project exploring the life and career struggles of successful black and white women in corporate America. In comparing the experiences of 120 managers, Bell (Tuck School of Business) and Nkomo (U. of South Africa) find that race continues to influence relationships between black and white women, even though both are still subordinate to white men. While black w... Our Separate Ways: Black and White Women and the Struggle for Professional Identity
